Principal's Report

This will be the last full newsletter for 2019. Next week we will publish a brief newsletter with a list of those who received awards at either the Primary or Secondary Presentation Day Assemblies. It is a busy time of the year (especially this year) and we are appreciative of all the members of our Community who will support our students on Friday at these assemblies. When given the opportunities our students do shine. The Presentation Day assemblies provide us with an opportunity to collectively reflect on their achievements.

On Tuesday evening we held our Year 6 dinner. It is a time for us to reflect on their achievements in primary over the last seven years. I thank all of those who decorated Bill's Block to make the evening special for our Year 6 students. I believe all those in attendance appreciated that Bill's Block is now air conditioned.

Opportunities allow our students to find out what they like and what might constitute future employment and career path. We also assist our students develop their talents through persistence, hard work and the development of a growth mindset. We believe that our students deserve to live empowered lives with passion.

The Federal Government has an excellent website called e-safety Commissioner. This is the web address of the e-safety site: <https://www.esafety.gov.au/>. It has great resources for parents and schools on safety. The site provides tips for parents to help keep their child or children safe online. The e-safety Commissioner's website also has a button where you can report abuse. The e-Safety Commissioner can act to have content (especially content impacting children) removed from social media sites. Just as we teach our children to be safe in the real world we need to teach our students to be safe in the cyber and virtual world.

2019, especially the end of 2019, has been challenging for most if not all of our community. The recent events have highlighted the strengths of our communities such as the way we work together and support each other. Elsewhere in this newsletter are fliers from various organisation on how to talk with children after an emergency. Here are some contact details of organisation with various resources and support:

- Red Cross Helping children and young people cope with crisis booklet www.redcross.org.au/recover
- Headspace <https://headspace.org.au/eheadspace/>
- Kids help line Kidshelpline

COMMUNITY CHRISTMAS SERVICE

Due to the uncertainty and pressure of our current situation in Woodenbong and area, there are not plans to have a "Community Christmas Service" from the combined churches as we have in the past. We apologies for failing to do it this year.

There is an alternative to be considered if interested. "The Risk" church family are hosting a service followed by a light luncheon on 8th December. If the Summerland Way is open they would welcome all visitors. This service will followed a Christmas theme as it is their last service for the year.

Where: The Risk Hall

When: 8th December, 2019 at 11:00 am

Any freewill offerings will be donated to the Firies.

SRE News

The students have had a great time together in SRE this year. SRE is a space where students can ask the big questions about God and explore what the Bible has to say about life and beyond.

Infants and primary students actively participate in the games, songs and stories that make up the lessons. Secondary students are encouraged to share their perceptions on lesson topics which makes for vibrant and lively classroom discussion.

The SRE teaching team are committed to sharing the message of God's love with the students at WCS and we do see SRE bringing a real sense of wellbeing to the lives of students who participate.

A reminder to parents of Kindy and year 7 students in 2020: If you wish your child to enjoy SRE next year you'll need to sign and return asap, the separate SRE Participation letter which you'll receive at enrolment.

Thank you.

Looking after children who have been affected by disasters

Hundreds and sometimes thousands of people every year are affected by disasters around Australia. A large number of these are children who may have suffered major disruption, losses, or lived through frightening experiences. Many other children have been affected indirectly, through hearing about the disaster or knowing someone who has suffered great loss. These can all be challenging experiences for children.

How you can help your children recover

After a traumatic event, children need comfort, reassurance and support, and to know that they are safe and are being looked after. Try to spend more time with your children and provide them with plenty of affection through cuddles and hugs. Sometimes children can better express their feelings through play than through words, so make time to play with them. Let them be more dependent on you for a while and try to re-establish daily routines, for example routines around mealtimes, bedtimes or returning to school where possible.

Find out what your children know in case they have mistaken ideas or facts about the disaster, and correct any misconceptions. Keep your responses appropriate to the age of your child and also appropriate to the child's level of understanding and emotional maturity. Young children often need reassurance more than facts.

Listen to your children's concerns. Listen closely to what they are asking or saying, and think about whether they are looking for factual information, or if the questions are expressing anxiety about the disaster. Try to keep your own feelings to yourself when talking about their feelings. Let them know that you understand how they feel.

Monitor how much your children are being exposed to media stories of the disaster. Children can become re-traumatised by watching repeated images on the television, and it is best to try to shield them from the media.

Guidelines for parents and caregivers

Impact of trauma on children

People cope with trauma in different ways and there is no one standard pattern of reaction to the stress of traumatic experiences. Children are not always able to express complex feelings in the same direct way that adults do and therefore do not often show the same reactions to stress as adults. It is therefore very important to look out for changes in children's behaviour that suggest they are unsettled or distressed.

Reactions to disasters may result in changes to children's normal behaviour such as:

- Changes in their play, drawing, dreams or spontaneous conversations
- Regressive behaviour – children behaving younger than they normally do
- Nightmares
- Anxiety about sleeping alone
- Trouble getting to sleep
- Irritability or anger
- Tantrums
- Fussy eating
- Withdrawing
- Wanting to stay close to a parent
- Problems concentrating at school

Children are usually very resilient and for most children these reactions will gradually reduce over time with the support of families.

Be aware of how you talk. Adults need to be conscious of the presence of children when discussing the disaster. It is a good idea not to let children overhear adult conversations about worrying things if they cannot join in at their own age or stage of development.

And most importantly, look after yourself as it is likely that you have also been distressed by the experience of the disaster. When parents are feeling cared for themselves, they are better able to respond to the needs of their children.

Seeking further help

While most children will bounce back after a traumatic event, some children may show prolonged distress and could benefit from professional assistance. Children who are at risk of developing more lasting problems are those who have experienced significant disruption and losses, and those who have previously developed problems in response to other traumas.

Warning signs of more significant and lasting distress in children include:

- Continual and aggressive emotional outbursts
- Serious problems at school
- Preoccupation with the disaster
- Intense anxiety or emotional difficulties

A qualified mental health professional such as a psychologist can help such children and their parents or caregivers to understand and deal with any thoughts, feelings and behaviours associated with the disaster.

Speak to your GP about a referral to a psychologist or phone the APS Find a Psychologist service on 1800 333 497. Alternatively, you can locate a psychologist in your area by visiting the APS Find a Psychologist website – www.findapsychologist.org.au.

For more information about the APS disaster recovery resources please visit psychology.org.au/topics/disasters/

Talking with children after an emergency

It's important to talk to your children if they have been exposed to emergencies – either first hand or through the media.

- Try to minimise the distressing images or verbal media reports your children see. If your children are watching or listening to reports of emergencies, be with them to help them make sense of the situation – they need your perspective, guidance and reassurance.
- Be aware of what your child is being exposed to at school, both in the playground and the classroom or outside school on the internet and through social media.
- If your child has been personally involved in an emergency, check with them to see how they are going. You can help them by reassuring them of their safety.
- Encourage your child to talk about their feelings, thoughts and concerns. Don't dismiss their issues as trivial – this can create a belief that the events were too awful to talk about.
- Acknowledge concerns that are real and correct any misconceptions.
- If you have any concerns talk to your doctor, or seek a referral to an experienced psychologist.

Free mental health support for people affected by the bushfires...

healthy
minds

If you're a Mid North Coast or Northern NSW residents who has been affected by the bushfires, you are being encouraged to access free mental health support via the local Healthy Minds program.

The stress of experiencing something such as a bushfire can leave people at a higher risk of developing depression or anxiety, even if they are not directly dealing with loss of property and/or possessions.

"At North Coast PHN, we are coordinating a mental health response that includes widening the eligibility criteria for the Healthy Minds program. Persons affected by the local fires can now book in for free face-to-face Healthy Minds counselling services and do not require a referral from their GP to commence supports."

Julie Sturges, North Coast PHN

Please note, Healthy Minds is for people experiencing mild to moderate mental health concerns and is not a crisis service. If you require immediate support, please contact Lifeline on 13 11 14 or Beyond Blue on 1300 22 4636. For children under 12 years, call the Kids Helpline on 1800 551 800. In an emergency, please call 000 or go to your nearest hospital emergency department.

The intake for Healthy Minds is now being managed by Neami National through their Connect to Wellbeing North Coast program. Connect to Wellbeing North Coast has been made possible by funding from North Coast Primary Health Network.

Call Healthy Minds
1300 160 339
between 8.30am – 5pm
Monday to Friday.

No referral needed.

Free face-to-face or telephone counselling services with a mental health practitioner, such as a psychologist or mental health social worker, will provide people with strategies and techniques to manage their mental health

Healthy Minds services are available across the north coast of NSW.

Water for Woodenbong Initiative

The WPA would like to advise the community of Woodenbong about an initiative a former member of our community has put forward - Water for Woodenbong

After the recent fires many of our community have exhausted their drinking water to ensure their properties remained safe. It has been suggested that we gather funds to buy in water to enable our community to have their supplies replenished and reduce the possibility of serious disease and illness.

Donations to this fund have already been received and water purchases are under way. The WPA are assisting by providing a central receiving point for any funds donated. This information has already been advertised on Facebook.

The WPA have agreed to donate $10,000 which would allow initial purchases of water to be made quickly for those in dire need.

A list is being compiled for those in need. Any members of the Woodenbong farming community having concerns or questions please contact Chris Reid on 0429 351 215 for more information.

Aged Care Woodenbong
